

"Souls or No Souls" in Platonic Surrealism

In Platonic Surrealism (PS), it's not based upon soul or no soul, neither one... It's really ALL SOULS, all in constant motion and change, until the Fractured Mind becomes the Primordial Mind once again, then almost immediately, 10 to the -10th second later 'detonates again' and the 'wheel of life' starts over again, for a new 'Yuga'.

All those lives do indeed exist; but none of them belong to the 'false self' and not even one of them is more important than any other of them.

So sure, in PS, cling onto a 'temporary self' (collection of Monads currently cooperating). Sometimes they collaborate for a trillion years....

then one might be dropped, another one added; or maybe you take a nap from ALL stories (souls) for a long while.

That's what happened to me... I watched 4 monads stop collaborating back in 2012.

Today a maggot, tomorrow the Christ, and both are ontologically equivalent.

That statement is not meant as an insult, either to 'the Christ' or the maggot for that matter.

IF ONLY ONE THING EXISTS, then it is incorrect to deride ANY OF IT, or to put ANY OF IT, one above the other.

When one realizes to their core, that they are in fact PURE AWARENESS watching all the movies (souls) within POTENTIALITY then the rising and falling of souls means exactly NOTHING.

Kevin Cann
Platonic Surrealism
5/3/2025